

Happenings:

- Keep Greenville Beautiful plans to partner with the West Greenville Beautification Committee to add more beauty to Beatrice May's park located on Farmville Boulevard. There is talk of an additional sidewalk, paths, more flowers and a bench or two.
- Cheryl Tafoya and Susan Daughtry are currently working together to write two grants through KGB for recycling projects. One will be directed towards public housing and one towards increasing the number of schools for Feed the Bin.

Hooray For Day Lilies!

Van Brown, owner of Earthscapes Landscaping Company, recently donated 700 Day Lilies to Keep Greenville Beautiful. In the fall, Brown will donate 7000 to 8000 more. Van says that Day Lilies are the number one flower in the world.

The city of Greenville has been planting the flowers where needed and will also plant the flowers in the fall with help from volunteers. WNCT sent a cameraman out for the "official" donation on May 13. He left the camera sitting in the field while he was being toured by Van.

Greenville Times also printed the story in the May 27th issue.

Website Is Up!!!

To get to the KGB's website, you have to first go to the City's site then click "Departments," "Public Works" then "Keep Greenville Beautiful." The brochure is on the site so that it can be printed out for someone who wants to join.
